

Chapter 1: Introduction

David Forman, David H. Brewster, Betsy Kohler, and Marion Piñeros

The main objective of the Cancer Incidence in Five Continents (CI5) series, published by the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) and the International Association of Cancer Registries (IACR), is to present comparable data on cancer incidence for all countries around the world for which high-quality data have been made available by population-based cancer registries. This new volume of CI5 (Volume X) provides information about cancers diagnosed during the period from 2003 to 2007. Every effort has been made to ensure that the information included in this volume can be used with confidence to compare geographical patterns and – by comparison with data from earlier volumes – temporal trends in cancer. In CI5 Volume I, which was published in 1966 and reported on cancer incidence in the early 1960s, it was stated that “the most valuable data are, undoubtedly, the rates obtained by recording the occurrence of every case of cancer in a defined community over a specified period.” Such recording remains the core task of cancer registries today, and it is the function of CI5 to report their results using a common format.

CALL FOR DATA

For CI5 Volume X, a call for data and an accompanying questionnaire were sent to all population-based cancer registries that were members of IACR in September 2011. The call for data and the questionnaire were also published on the IACR website, with both documents available in English, French, and Spanish. Registries that wished to submit datasets for Volume X were requested to do so using the IARC portal (see Chapter 6) – a new feature for this volume – and the questionnaire was available for completion online. Detailed instructions for preparing the registry dataset and the accompanying mortality and population information were provided in the call for data. In some countries, registries delegated data submission to their national associations or networks, but each registry was required to submit its own responses to the questionnaire.

Although the reference time period for Volume X was defined as 2003–2007, contributors were also asked to send data for years before and (if available) after the reference period, to allow the volume editors to verify certain aspects of quality, comparability, and completeness for each submission. Not all registries were able to provide data for the whole time period covered by Volume X, but a minimum consecutive series of 3 years was required for a registry to be considered for inclusion.

NUMBER OF DATASETS RECEIVED AND INCLUDED

Data were received from 370 cancer registries covering 521 populations in 80 countries. Data from 80 cancer registries, representing 97 populations, were excluded. Volume X consequently presents cancer incidence data from 68 countries, 290 cancer registries, and 424 populations (Table 1.1).

GEOGRAPHICAL COVERAGE IN CI5 VOLUME X

The geographical coverage in CI5 Volume X by continent is shown in Table 1.2. Data are included from 8 of the 15 African countries that submitted data, 11 of the 11 Central and South American countries, 2 of the 2 North American countries, 15 of the 18 Asian countries, 31 of the 33 European countries, and 3 of the 4 Oceanic countries.

The proportions of cancer registries that submitted datasets for Volume X and were accepted for inclusion (by continent) are as follows: Africa: 44% (8/18), Central and South America: 71% (25/35), North America: 94% (66/70), Asia: 62% (63/101), Europe: 87% (118/135), and Oceania: 91% (10/11).

The proportion of the world's total population covered by the registries included in Volume X is 14%, with the following levels of coverage by continent:

Table 1.1. The number of cancer registry datasets (2003–2007) submitted to and accepted for CI5 Volume X

	Submitted	Accepted
Countries	80	68
Registries	370	290
Populations	521	424

Table 1.2. Geographical coverage in CI5 Volume X by continent

	Countries		Registries		Populations

Africa	15	8	18	8	18	8
Central and South America	11	11	35	25	35	25
North America	2	2	70	66	196	180

Oceania	4	3	11	10	21	20
Total	80*	68*	370	290	521	424

*The sum of the number of individual countries is greater than the total, reflecting the fact that some countries (i.e. France and the USA) have territory on more than one continent.

Africa: 2%, Central and South America: 8%, North America: 95%, Asia: 6%, Europe: 42%, and Oceania: 78%.

COVERAGE IN THE 10 VOLUMES OF CI5

Fig. 1.1 shows the overall coverage in terms of the number of countries, registries, and populations included in each volume of CI5. A full overview identifying all the registry populations appearing in all 10 volumes, as well as the specific incidence time periods contributed by each registry, is provided in Table 1.3 at the end of this chapter.

The steady increase in coverage of the world's population by cancer registration has been accompanied by significant developments in standardization of registration methodology, definitions, and coding. The editors of the present volume, building on the foundation laid in the first volume, have made every effort to standardize the data presented, or where this was not possible, to draw attention to any differences that might affect comparability between registries. The editorial processes of checking internal coherence, consistency, and completeness are described in Chapters 5 and 6 of this volume, and are broadly based on principles outlined in IARC Scientific Publication No. 95 – Cancer Registration: Principles and Methods (Jensen et al., 1991).

Improved definition of registration methodology and increased adherence to internationally recognized standards have also led to more stringent editorial processes. With each successive volume of CI5, the editors have become more demanding about the quality of the data published in the book. However, the editors also have to accept that some datasets from registries in less-developed countries may be less complete than those from registries in more-developed countries, because of problems of underdiagnosis due to local medical and economic situations (as opposed to underregistration) and/or problems with enumeration of the population. But these datasets are nevertheless of great interest because they describe cancer incidence in populations for which no other information is available and that retain unique cultural habits that may provide valuable clues to cancer etiology. On the pages of this volume that present tables reporting each registry's data by site, an asterisk preceding the registry title indicates that special considerations (which may include underregistration) must be taken into account in interpreting the published rates or indicators of quality (see Chapter 5). The specific reasons for a given asterisk are stated under the heading "Notes on the data" in the accompanying narrative.

CONTENT AND LAYOUT OF THE BOOK

The contact information for all contributing registries, along with the names of the individuals who collaborated in the preparation of this volume, is provided at the beginning of this book. Maps showing the location of each contributing registry are provided on pages 2–22.

Following this introduction, Chapter 2 describes the registries in terms of geographical location, legislative background, and registration practices. Chapter 3 presents the system of classification used to report the incidence data, and addresses the issue of comparability of coding practices between the registries. For selected cancers, the data have been analysed by histological subtype within site. Chapter 4 introduces the histological groupings used and explains the rationale behind them.

Issues that can affect comparability between registries and validity of registry data are discussed in Chapter 5, as are the methods by which the submitted datasets were assessed; and Chapter 6 describes how the raw data received for CI5 were processed. Chapter 7 describes the summary measures of incidence used, and Chapter 8 explains the structure of the various tables included in this book and on the CI5 website (<http://ci5.iarc.fr>).

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The editors would like to thank Eric Masuyer and Sébastien Antoni, who spent considerable time processing the data and questionnaire responses sent by each submitting registry, and subsequently handled the iterative communications and requests for clarification from the registries; Mathieu Laversanne, who created the maps; and Isabelle Savage, who acted as the CI5 Volume X Editorial Board secretary, supported by Katuska Veselinovic. The editors would particularly like to thank the many directors and registrars from all the cancer registries that submitted data to this volume, for their efforts to produce cancer incidence data and make them available to the world. Their work is the cornerstone of descriptive cancer epidemiology, and provides a basis for future cancer research and control policies.
